

WOULD RAISE FIRE RATING OF CITY TO SECOND CLASS

Ordinances Will Be Strengthened and Other Steps Taken to Eliminate Objections of Underwriters.

Steps will be taken in the immediate future to raise Memphis from its present position of a fourth-class fire rating to the third, or, maybe, the second, according to Horace Johnson, commissioner of public utilities, grounds and buildings, and John E. Edgar, commissioner of fire and police. Such an advance will save the citizens of the city from $250,000 to $300,000 in insurance premiums, according to the rate obtained.

Conditions which prevent the city from being raised at once to a higher rating were pointed out to the commissioners Monday by E. O. Goldsmith, assistant chief engineer of the national board of fire underwriters. Mr. Goldsmith held several conferences with the two commissioners and Dan C. Newton, building inspector.

Among the steps to be taken by the city to improve fire conditions here will be to bring all old ordinances bearing in any way upon fire prevention up to date and to pass new ordinances where the old ones are found to be deficient, even when brought down to date; and the increase in the firefighting forces to a sufficient number to re-establish the double platoon system.

This latter step will be taken not later than Jan. 1, and there is a possibility that it may occur before that time. The applications from a majority of the old firemen for reinstatement on their job places a sufficient number of men at the disposal of Commissioner Edgar, who is disposed to restore the double platoon system at the earliest moment. It is considered expedient and feasible. Some of the ordinances which will be worked over to fit the occasion relate to the storage of combustibles and explosives and the storage in cellars of certain kinds of acids. About a year ago the Memphis underwriters made an investigation of the city. Many of the points charged against the city at that time were based upon the storage of combustibles, explosives and acids, but these have been removed by the city to a very large extent. Conditions upon which complaints were made were attributed to the war.

A further preventive step by the city will be the extension of the downtown fire district and the shingle district. The fire district will be extended from its present limits just east of Orleans to Bellevue boulevard, and from Poplar avenue on the north to Railroad avenue on the south. The shingle district will be extended from its present limits along Bellevue boulevard to include approximately all of the old city limits before the addition of new territory last fall. It will extend to Trexvant avenue on the east and from the North to the South Parkway. In this district no more wood shingles will be allowed in new construction.

AUBREY HOLLOWELL STILL AT LARGE

Aubrey Hollowell, wanted on four charges, one of which is assault and battery against his young wife, was still at large Tuesday following his release from city jail by an officer who thought he was Tom Hollowell, Aubrey's brother, who was arrested on a single charge. Search for Aubrey proved unavailing.

Descriptions of the men were obtained and those sent to Chief of Detective Griffin here, fit identically the three held here. It is probable, according to Griffin, that Hamilton and his partners will be sent back to Michigan.
